Douglas Paul Ciemniecki (1961 – 2020)

A devoted member of the 8th Armored Division Association Family

Douglas Paul Ciemniecki, 58, of Englishtown, passed away Saturday, August 29, 2020 at home surrounded by his loving family. He was born in Plainfield and raised in Kenilworth, NJ. Douglas was an electrician and building maintenance Died – September 17, 2020 at 96 years. May he rest in peace with his comrades, family and friends.

September 17, 2020, we lost another member of the "greatest generation," our comrade and 8th Armored Division veteran, Donald Wolff. He was a few weeks shy of 97 years of age. His mind was sharp but his body was tired.

Special father, grandfather, great grandfather and friend, he served our country with pride in World War II. He fought in the Battle of the Bulge and helped liberate several concentration camps as a tank driver in General Patton's 3rd Army. He served with the 80th Tank Battalion of the 8th Armored Division.

One of his favorite memories was being accompanied by his grandson, Cory, who also served in the Army, on the 2 day tour to Washington, D.C. as part of Honor Flight Arizona. The organization flies WWII veterans to the nation's capital to visit "their" memorial and thank them for their service and sacrifice on behalf a grateful nation.

Don was born in Cedar Falls, Iowa, November of 1923. After WWII ended, he met his future bride, Bonnie Lee, on a blind date. They were married six months later in 1949. Both decided they'd endured too many cold Iowa winters and chose to make their home in Phoenix, Arizona in 1952.

His profession as a custom homebuilder kept him busy well into his 80's. He loved building but more important were the lifelong relationships he made with his clients - building many of them more than one home. He estimates he built around 2000 homes throughout the valley - and as he'd say, "all are still standing!"

He raised his two daughters to know how to use a hammer and a saw along with the rest of the toolbox! He taught both girls to drive in one day in an old Ford truck with a gear shift on the steering column. They learned the hard way that most of his advice was right all along!

He had a sweet tooth and loved telling stories about his Danish upbringing and the delicious desserts he'd grown up with in Cedar Falls. In later years, he spent many an hour perusing the aisles at Ceretta's Candy Company.

In the last 5 years he made many new friends at his residence at the Beatitudes. Breakfast with "the group" was usually a two-hour affair with what he called "laughter and lies!" He loved to talk...boy did he love to talk...and loved those most, who liked to listen!

He is preceded in death by his wife, Bonnie who passed in 2017.

Don is survived by his daughter and son in law, Toni & Stephen Gautereaux of San Diego, California and daughter Suzanne Wolff & Thom Khaler of Phoenix, Arizona.

Makowski, Sandra Marocchi and her husband Jeff, Peter Rensch, Jr. and his fiancé Ava Himsel, Charles Lentini, Jr., Steven Pell, Kristin Monroe and Paris Monroe. Cherished great grandfather of five great grandchildren. Peter had a great love of horses and was an avid western horseback rider and loved to cook, garden, read and loved to watch the westerns. Funeral from Costa Memorial Home Boulevard and Central Ave. Hasbrouck Heights on Saturday, August 22nd at 9 AM. Funeral Liturgy from Corpus Christi R.C. Church at 10 AM. The 8th Armored Division and its veterans served gallantly in WWII in the European Theater. They were engaged in combat in the Battle of the Bulge; Netherlands, Rhineland, Central Germany and Pilsen in Czechoslovakia losing hundreds killed in action and thousands wounded and injured in service.

They acquired the nickname - the 'Thundering Herd'. Many of the dead of the Division rest in Margraten Military Cemetery in the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg.

The 8th Armored Division Association is composed of the aging survivors of the Division, their descendants and friends who desire to commemorate the service of the men of the 'Thundering Herd' with a memorial bronze plaque to be placed in a prominent location in the new Museum of the US Army at Ft Belvoir, VA.

The Association has commissioned a noted sculptor of military works, Andrew Chernak to create an appropriate representation of the service of the unit in battle. We hope to have the funds raised by the end of 2018, and plan on a 2019 placement and dedication.

This memorial will cost $14,000. We are appealing to the public and those who support the US military and its veterans to advance the effort by donating to the cause.

The Association is planning a wide ranging campaign to obtain the funds for the memorial. We encourage all supporters of the WWII 'Fighters for Freedom', veterans and friends of the 8th Armored Division to make a donation.

The Association has a 501c3 designation and any donation will be tax deductible. Please be generous!

Handguns used during WWII.

Hello to everyone in the 8th Armored Division, families and friends. Hopefully things with the COVID-19 virus are quieting down some and we can all start to get back to a more normal life. I was recently reading an article from an old magazine issue of WWII History.

While military side arms are generally associated with noncommissioned officers (NCOs) and officers, the use of handguns was much more widespread in World War II. Many soldiers carried handguns in addition to their main small arms, and this was especially true of machine gunners, paratroopers, military police and generally any enlisted man who felt the need for a little extra firepower. As with the other small arms of World War II, most handguns were distinctive and unique to each respective nation. As a result, the handguns of the era have become quite iconic. From the Colt M1911A1 to the German Luger P08, the guns had unique character of a bygone era.

Here is a look at some of the most famous and iconic side arms of World War II: Colt M1911A1 (USA) “Often known simply as the ‘.45’, the M1911 was actually a holdover from World War I. This single-action, semiautomatic handgun was magazine-fed and recoil-operated. As noted by its famous moniker, it fired the .45 ACP (automatic Colt pistol) cartridge. “The pistol was actually designed by Walther P38 (Germany) “The Walther P38 first entered tests in 1938, when it was accepted as the replacement for the Luger, but it didn’t enter widespread production until 1939. It was originally meant to fully replace the older P08 by 1942, but wartime production never reached full capacity. The P38 relied on the standard 9x19mm Parabellum bullet, but other versions were produced in 7.65x22mm and even .22 Long Rifle, while experimental .45 ACP and .38 Super versions were also produced in very limited numbers. Originally the handgun was fitted with walnut grips, but as the war continued these were replaced with Bakelite grips. “Perhaps because of the reputation of the Luger, the Walther P38 was typically overlooked by American souvenir hunters, and even gun collectors for many years. However, the handgun has become more popular with collectors today. It also remains in service with German police units today, proving that the P38 was a reliable and worthy successor to the Luger. Paying respect on Memorial Day. Victorious – What next?

Walther PP and PPK (Germany) “The name Walther PPK probably sounds familiar, as it is the handgun used by the fictional superspy James Bond. But the gun actually pre-dates the Ian Fleming novels, and certainly the Bond movies. The Walther PP does not mean ‘Pocket Pistol’ as is sometimes noted, but rather ‘Polizeipistole’, as in Police Pistol, while the PPK was ‘Polizeipistole Kriminalmodell’, meaning Police Pistol Detective Model, and issued to plainclothes detectives. It is also worth noting that while the gun was used by Nazi German officials, the PP was first released in 1929 and the PPK in 1931, before the Nazi government came to power. “Both versions are credited with being the world’s first truly successful double action semi-automatic pistols, and hence the action was widely copied, it was used in the later Walther P38. While the handguns were widely used throughout the war and it was a PPK that was used by Adolf Hitler when the dictator took his own life. Both versions remained in use after the war and have seen numerous improvements. The PPK/E is the latest version produced and it entered production in 2000.

Webley Revolver (Great Britain) “To say that the British were not exactly ready for World War II is a true understatement, and it shows in the nation’s small arms development. This of course included the side arms, and the British made do with the basic Webley revolver that was first introduced in 1887, and which actually remained in use until 1963, “This top-break revolver features an automatic extraction system that helped with the reloading. The first version of the handgun, the Webley Mk I, was adopted in 1887, while the Mk IV saw widespread use in the lived with it. While on board the aircraft carrier USS Cabot, he wrote some reports indicating that the naval crew had an easier life compared to the infantry in Europe, for which he was criticized by fellow correspondents. Pyle, who had been a member of the U.S. Naval Reserve, conceded that his heart was with the servicemen in Europe, but continued to do his job. He persevered. After covering the assault on Okinawa, the largest amphibious operation in the Pacific during the war, he landed on Ie Shima (now renamed Iejima), a small island north of Okinawa, with the 305th Infantry Regiment, 77th Inf Div on 17 April 1945. He had had premonitions of his death, and the next day he was killed by Japanese machine gun fire. In tribute to their friend, the men of the 77th Infantry Division erected a monument that still stands at the site of his death with the inscription: "At this spot the 77th Infantry Division lost a buddy, Ernie Pyle, 18 April 1945." General Eisenhower, echoing the sentiment of the men serving in the Pacific theater, said: "The GIs in Europe – and that means all of us – have lost one of our best and most understanding friends." President Roosevelt had died six days before Ernie, so recognition from the Commander-in-Chief came from President Harry Truman who said of Pyle, "No man in this war has so well told the story of the American fighting man as American fighting men wanted it told. He deserves the gratitude of all his countrymen." Thanks Ernie, and thank you, David, for bringing us this story.

The 8th Armored Division in the Battle The Ruhr Pocket
(CCA = Combat Command A; CCB = Combat Command B; CCR = Combat Command R [R = Reserve])

The success of the Rhine crossing operations by Allied forces encircled approximately 430,000 German soldiers of Army Group B comprising 21 divisions of the Wehrmacht, trapping them in an area that came to be known as the Ruhr Pocket. The Twelfth Army Group was tasked with reducing the pocket.

On 3 April 8 turned 180 degrees in response to orders into the Ruhr Pocket and CCR attacked west toward Recklinghausen. CCR captured the towns of Stripe and Nordorf, and continued through Vollinghausen, Oberhagen, and Ebbinghausen before stopping for the night in front of Horne. The next day CCA attacked Erwitte. The US 9th Air Force continued to provide close air support as the division continued into the Ruhr Pocket through heavy fighting in the Lippstadt area.

Award of Bronze Star Medal to 2nd Lt. Elwin J. Brown

Forward Observer, 405th Armored Field Artillery, 8th Armored Division

Under the provisions of AR 600-45, 23rd September 1945 as amended, the Bronze Star Medal is awarded to

Second Lieutenant Elwin J Brown (then Sergeant 02016434)

Field artillery, United States Army

For meritorious achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy in Germany from 28 March 1945 to 14 April 1945.

As crew chief for a forward observer, Lieutenant Brown was constantly under small arms, mortar, and artillery fire.

When the forward observer was wounded, he immediately took command and directed artillery fire in support of tanks and infantry in a superior manner.

On one occasion, although pinned down by intense fire, he placed smoke on the enemy, enabling the infantry as well as himself to withdraw.

When his radio was knocked out, he established alternate communication by exposing himself to intense enemy fire .

His courage and devotion to duty, reflect great credit on himself and the armed forces of the United States.

Lieutenant Elwin entered military service from Maine.

He served in the 405th Armored Field Artillery Battalion of the 8th Armored Division in the ETO in WWII.

Thanks to Stephen Brown, son of Lt. Elwin Brown
